I spoke with my attorney and she says that I am both entitled to information about who is caring for the children and to payment receipts. If this is an issue, you'll have to find other childcare arrangements if those items are to get paid.

Children thrive on predictable routines, which provide a sense of security and reduce anxiety. Set times is part of that.

Consistently seeing their father is in their best interest, yes.

The specific date and time being consistent is irrelevant to children, only to yourself. That level of executive functioning comes much later in their development.

Unfortunately I am not your secretary. You have the legal ability to call the doctor or school for any questions you may have pertaining to the children. I have my own life now and am quite busy. It would be helpful if you could direct your questions to the appropriate sources. I do not have the ability for daily communication with you unless it is necessary or an emergency.

Co-parenting also does not require daily communication. LJ is okay but it's imperative that you understand we do not need daily contact. This app is not a texting platform. However if you cut back the contact and strictly keep any communication 100% child focused and keep any negative comments that you direct at me personally to yourself then I would be more than happy to go into detail when needed.

Understood

“She isn’t feeling well and has a fever” is too much, but the below soliloquy is an absolutely appropriate response...

This is not coparenting, nor is it common decency. I genuinely don’t understand how you are okay continuing to treat other human beings so callously and awfully, especially those who literally have given you the world without any hesitation.

Enjoy your day.

To give you some information regarding whom I utilize for childcare. Her name is Candi Williams and she watches the children at my house on an as needed basis. Typically Wednesdays, and on the weekends depending on my work flow.

I will provide you with receipts at the end of each week by Monday mornings. With summer approaching and the kids being out of school, my need for her to watch the children will be increasing.

Hey when I go to make a payment in OFW it says your bank account is not linked and will not let me submit the payment. You might need to fix something on your end.

If I were to order her another leotard, what's her size? 4-5T is what my order history shows but my gut says that's large and might be a mixup on Amazon looking the item back up.

Yeah that size sounds more accurate - I'll order her another one

Which of these would be she like me to order?

Ordered.

She's 2-3T.

She does need a backup leotard for dance class. She already got a couple stains on the one she has.

Oh, that's a valid point. Yes, I'm okay with that.

If I were to order her another leotard, what's her size? 4-5T is what my order history shows but my gut says that's large and might be a mixup on Amazon looking the item back up.

Beau got his blood drawn today. He was so brave after his therapist talked to him yesterday and I had a long talk with him about it last night so he was prepared. He was the bravest boy and watched them put the needle in and everything. He didn't even move a muscle! But after he looked very pale so as I carried him through the hospital he threw up all over the floor (he was fasting too) so I took him to the bathroom and a nice lady bought him a water from the gift shop. He's all better now. I think him watching them take his blood made him queasy.

That jives - his great grandfather, grandfather, and I all have the same neurological reaction (called Vasovagal Syncope) to seeing blood or things like that. If his hands get clammy and sweaty, he's gonna semi-faint or get really nauseous - and it happens quick.

I'm really proud of him for doing so well, though! If he knows what's coming I think he'll learn to be more okay with that kinda stuff over time. He's so very brave

Of course.

Also to share with you. Beau's therapist told me he's diagnosed with adjustment disorder and separation anxiety disorder.

Depends on the X-ray. If it shows infection then they will but I hope that's not the case. Some kids end up getting them pulled or capped when they are like LJ's. She recently has said a few times that her teeth hurt so we will see but I'll let you know what the dentist says.

October 2023 the parts were attached to the M5. No one touched the M5. You would be the only person that would know where those pieces went.

And since then I have no clue where the many individuals who have been to the ranch to get it into this state it's now in put them - more than likely they got tossed in the cleanup process.

If I knew where they were I would tell you - I have absolutely no use for them.

Good. No infection so if her teeth were to be extracted it would be elective and the dentist will do it but I am not even considering it as an option however if her teeth start causing her pain to where she wakes up crying in the middle of the night then removing the teeth will be the best thing for her. Check up in 6 months.

Of course! We've had the busiest schedule lately but 1pm will be good. They have their dentist appointment at 11am. I'm praying the dentist doesn't say LJ needs her teeth extracted...

I just called to tell them we were on our way and she said they can't allow us to have the visit since she already called you and told you it was canceled. I told them a few weeks ago we would need to cancel but when i decided we would make it I didn't realize they won't allow the visit. Ugh! I feel so bad!

Hey,

Just wanted to give you a heads up that the kids will be missing their therapy appointments on the 10th and 11th and will resume the 24th and 25th. We will be out of town. I updated their schedule in the calendar for June.

Also, I talked with Julia yesterday and the tap class Beau would join is a beginner class but she's had those students for awhile and she thinks it might be difficult for Beau so he is going to try tap in LJ's class on Monday to see if he likes it before paying and getting him on the schedule. I'll keep you posted.

I did buy him tap shoes and the t-shirt we bought for LJ is actually what he needs to wear for his uniform if he decides he wants to keep doing tap so we may have to buy another studio t-shirt.

Okay, I think so too. Let's plan for the visits to stay the same unless he decides to do the tap class so I'll let you know on Monday before the call if we need to push the call time out or not.

Okay cool, that sounds like a reasonable and logical plan - thank you. I'm happy to cover half the costs - this would be good for him in the long run.

To clarify - it's equipped for high flow, but might require a special dongle to go into the electrical plug by the hydraulic hoses to enable it. I never dealt with that stuff.

All the dog kennels are sold. There is a pile of dog kennel panels for me to keep 1 10x10 kennel for Scarlett and Kira but the rest is now gone. I might be back out there this evening after I show my clients homes to pile up the stall mats to sell, if that's okay?

It got the oil changed multiple times and the filters changed. My service manual did not state any of those other line items for far more hours, so you might be looking at a newer model's requirements.

Hey,

So those other buyers backed out for the dump trailer but I have a buyer wanting to pay $6,000 for it because of the past due registration and tires being expired and needing replaced and also the roll out cover having a hole in it... thoughts?

Okay, I'm still waiting for the prints but have the digitals. My to do list is a mile long. Here are the ones we paid for. I'll send you a physical copy when I get it.

Then again, things have also gone missing. For instance, the power jack on my featherlite was mysteriously gone after returning home from Florida. Phil sold quite a bit of stuff without my permission.

You were ordered by the judge to cooperate with selling the trailers. I was simply asking about the key because the box is locked.

I don't have any keys - or anything left, for that matter.

I'm not sure why half of the stuff that got sold got sold, Rose - you were responsible for the ranch while I was gone and you and Phil did so much wrong and illegally.

So, if you have any future questions of where anything is, I will still have the same response...I don't know where anything went, why it left, or who got compensated for any of my stuff.

Please stop asking me where anything is.

So instead of 1 more year of Pre-K she has two.

Maybe we both can call the district and try to get her in? I doubt they will though. It just sucks because she is already super advanced for her age and I feel like it will just set her back.

That's absurd, they are splitting kids into entirely different age groups when they do that - that's almost half of the year, making it ~42% of kids they are affecting in the long term

I was told by her Pre-K teacher that the district no longer allows them to test in. Idk what to do. Obviously one more year of Pre-K, fine. I think she could go into kindergarten at 4 she's just that smart! But fine 1 more year of Pre-K but 2?!?!

She's very advanced for her age - she should not be going through extra pre-k when she needs the more advanced stimulation

Maybe they can test her to get in? They won't lift the rules for no reason, but I would imagine they considered this scenario in 2025

Maybe we both can call the district and try to get her in? I doubt they will though. It just sucks because she is already super advanced for her age and I feel like it will just set her back.

We're supposed to be a team regarding the kids and other people are not meant to be the support staff to help you survive.

Actually it isn't - the court order was placed because you voiced these issues. It does not state you couldn't decide it isn't necessary and do the right thing - only what we are -not- allowed to do without ambiguity.

You have the ability to right this ship at any moment, and I implore you to please consider that with due weight

She made her rulings from -your- concerns that -you- voiced at -your- request.

Concerns that the forensic report validated are far different than you thought they were.

I'm not a monster, Rose. You had locked me outside in my underwear repeatedly - sometimes I had to bang on the windows for you to let me in before I froze to death. At one point you installed cameras in the cold springs house to track my movements, which I innocently thought wasn't weird out of care for your mental fears.

I didn't voice those concerns because I knew you didn't -intend- to harm me and were not mentally okay those instances. I never thought you'd go to these extreme lengths to continue painting me as a monster, but I will continue to speak up for what's right for the -kids-.

You have the ability to see the truth of what happened at any moment and fix this mess, rather than letting those angels have another day away from their Dad.

All I can do is continue to comply, which I will happily do - it's the only way those angels will ever get to have their father again with your steadfastness of my character.

without ambiguity.

We're supposed to be a team regarding the kids and other people are not meant to be the support staff to help you survive.

This idea that I'm a danger to them is absolutely absurd and you know it - I'm one of the nicest and most loving fathers you could possibly meet and it breaks my heart every single day that I don't get to even talk to them very often.

Maybe they can test her to get in? They won't lift the rules for no reason, but I would imagine they considered this scenario in 2025

The evidence was provided, and the judge chose to continue on the side of caution from the misleading narrative you provided - which considering the evils in this world, I think we both fully appreciate that.

However, if your argument is that the evidence shows I'm a monster then you're only evidence is your own words and not -provable- facts or events. Because of that, I tried to get you a seat with the forensic psychologist as well, but it was far too expensive.

All I can do is wait while the truth continues to be recorded, or hope and pray to God that you eventually will recognize how much you've mislead everyone, rather than taking accountability for your part in everything too.

I know you know in your heart this entire situation is morally wrong - you are too empathetic of a human being to not see their wake of destruction you've left behind out of fear, and the kids and I are the ones that are paying that particular bill now.

Okay. Julia said it's at a discounted cost if they do both Monday and Saturday.

So also, I talked to Julia and she said Beau is a complete natural at tap dance. For the rest of this month though she is going to just add him to the tap dance at the end of LJ's classes and next month bump him up to the bigger kid tap dance class.

So I apologize for the confusion. Let's keep the scheduled calls to the regular 5pm until next month.

Hey, so now that school is out for the summer and the kids will be home so much what do you think about adding the Saturday ballet/tap class? And Beau can join for the tap dance they do at the end.

These are getting doubly expensive, though, and we should be splitting this cost 50/50. I've currently just been paying for the classes since it wasn't too expensive, so we need to make sure the costs are split fairly.

I am trying to say this in the kindest way possible but, I really want and need to stick to the parenting plan /visitation schedule.

I have now been a single mother to 3 children for almost 2 years now. I am constantly busy with something and trying to keep up with everything. We have a very tight schedule now and my life is nothing like it was when you were in the picture.

I have 3 children to care for and when the school year was happening they all had 3 different drop off times, 2 different pick up times. Now it's summer and we just added more dance classes. All 3 kids are in dance now multiple days a week. All 3 children plus myself are in therapy multiple times a month. I also work like crazy and being a Realtor is not a 9-5. I've now taken on a 2nd job selling things at the ranch too.

Between the kids schedules, my schedule, chores around the house and everyday life tasks I am solely responsible for I am trying to get them all completed on top of the visitation schedule.

I am not complaining about my life one bit and I actually love my life very very much. I am simply asking you to be respectful regarding our custody agreement.

I understand you want more time. I get it. But this is what it is for right now and it would be helpful if you didn't ask for more calls as I will make sure as outlined in the proposed decree regarding a 3rd call each week.

Now, if the children do ask me to call you that is different and I will always tell them yes and make that call happen. But as far as contact and the calls please stick to what agreement is in place.

I am coming from a place of trying to get you to understand mine and the kids life and schedule.

I got the kids these swim trainer “life jackets” from the store. They wear them like a t-shirt. They felt super comfortable in them and went swimming solo for a good hour this evening. I’d send you the videos but Ava is in them and I know she would be upset if I did that. Best $70 spent all summer!!!

P.s. LJ’s eye is blue eyeshadow from her makeup she put on.
